“Hold on a second!” exclaimed Kaz, “Xorn are not hatched from eggs.” Kradh answered, in his knowing but not condescending manner, “My friend, there are mysteries of the worlds that we have still yet to fully understand or explore. Maybe they’ve been hatched for all of known history...until now. Think of this discovery as one akin to finding a new deposit of a previously unknown precious metal. We are helping to write history, my friend!”

Ok, so maybe Xorn are hatched from eggs and maybe they are not, but in this pack you’ll find two eggs, one broken and one intact, and two itty bitty baby Xorn. If you don’t need Xorn eggs they would also make cracking good dragon eggs or even the holding vessel for some alien monstrosity that is waiting to launch itself at unsuspecting adventurers. The eggs will very comfortably fit on a 25mm base (not included) or they can also do great without a base since both have been designed to sit flat on your gaming table. The baby Xorn are two different sculpts, with one designed to stand on his three feet and the other designed to either squat a bit on the ground or fit in an upside-down pose inside the cracked egg. Maybe he just broke through the shell and is ready to take his first steps. The baby Xorn can also nicely fit on 25mm bases or go without. This pack comes with supported and unsupported versions of all four models.
