When I saw Alsamen's model I was concerned I didn't have enough pink filament left. But having seen many partially headless prints finished with some type of headwear I figured if it didn't quite finish I could do something like this. Luckily I not only had enough filament to finish a full Waddles, I had enough to make another with a proper hat that even attaches.

I printed the pictured hat with black TPU which is nice and shiny which was lucky because the peg and hole were the same size so it was a tight fit. The included STL for the hat has been given a .5mm expansion so that it fits the peg easier. In the picture he's printed at 50% of original size.
