Someone asked on Reddit for an outlet cover for his sons room so here it is. Borg are not very interesting from a design perspective but I combined 2 things and made this. I did not try printing it upside down but with it face up you have to use supports due to the gap between the bed and the cover itself. Face down may work depending on how to orient it on your buildplate to account for the bridging your printer can do.

Any questions just ask :)

Only reason it is in white is because that is what I had in. You could do a change at layer setting to make different colors but the lip on the outside would be colored also. With a dual color printer you could do the interior a different color to make it pop a little bit or you could just paint it.
