A lid to cover your expensive sharpening stones is in the works

I finally got some Shapton Glass ceramic whetstones, along with an Atoma diamond stone, and I wanted a simple way to store them without the fear of them hitting each other. So on a free weekend, I whipped up this simple slotted holder. Coincidentally, the Atoma stones are almost the exact same dimensions as the Shapton Glass stones, so theoretically you could use this to store three Atomas, three Shapton stones, or whatever combination you choose.

Three stones (an extra coarse, a medium, and a fine grit) are all I personally need in my day to day routine.
