I came up with this model for the makerworld trophy contest.

A few weeks ago, i was scrolling through their trophy contest page and my kids were watching Mickey Mouse Clubhouse in the background, and I thought to myself, why don't i try to make a Mickey Mouse Trophy?! I decided to go for a minimal look to keep the design clean, simple, and safe for kids to handle. This is my first design ever and I used tinkercad, the process has been exciting!

The prints are straightforward, and the ears need a bit of supporting on all three versions.

For the version with the blank square, I included that one in order for folks to put letters or numbers one each square (ie. D100 for Disney's 100th anniversary) to easily make it a custom trophy or commemorate a special date.

These can be scaled up if desired, the one in the cover photo is the buttons version scaled up to 250%.

I hope you enjoy this model!
