This is a Makrame yarn unspooler for when you have the same problem my wife has. Those giant Yarn spools need stable feet and if you don't want to log around a heavy stand for those this stand is designed to be held down by two cheap clamps. The setup is somewhat portable and storable this way.

The fitting between the two parts is intentionally a bit loose because the clamps hold it firm in place. As a rod you can use pretty much anything you have laying around.

I made some cutouts to save some filament and the stability is still pretty great :)

I recommend 15% Infill and 4 outer walls for a rugged strength!
